New Wrinkle In Handling Glades Produce

HALF A MILLION $$$ — That's the investment in the new vacuum-cooling plant now under construction off Hwy. 441 north of Belle Glade. At left is over-all pic of facilities, taken from platform on railroad siding. In background is huge water-cooler, at top of which is a giant horizontal fan. Vacuum chambers are taller than man, and vacuum is applied after produce has been wheeled in on carts on tracks, and the doors clamped. Result is a "dry" refrigeration.

Govt. Booklet Cites Methods For Glades Market Expansion

BELLE GLADE — Several suggested answers to the "where-do-we-go-from-here" question are given in an official publication of the U.S. Department of Agriculture featuring the organization and operation of Glades Livestock Market Association.

Author of the publication booklet is C. G. Randall, who has written extensively about livestock auction markets in various parts of the nation.

Randall notes that Glades Livestock Market "has now reached a plateau in volume handled" and that further increase in volume will be slow and more difficult unless a "long-range planning program is set up to provide new services."

Among developments suggested by Randall for GLMA, are order buying and order selling for association members, and expanded field services.

If the market were to set up an order buying program, it would purchase stocker and feeder cattle on order from its members in outside areas and bring them into the Glades section for distribution to its patrons, to supplement local supply.

In order selling, the market would represent its members who had slaughter cattle for sale. Bids would be secured from packers on lots of cattle and the stock would be shipped direct from ranches and farms to meat plants at an agreed price and shrink.

Commenting on the two proposals, Market Manager George C. Young said this week that the association would have to increase its capital and agree to take the financial risk involved in order buying or selling.

Expanded field service recommended by Randall include appraising weights and values of cattle in pastures and feed lots and cutting out cattle for marketing. Also, holding marketing and outlook meetings in the Glades trade territory.

The Department of Agriculture expert lauded GLMA for having provided a marketing service for more than 1,000 ranchmen and farmers in south Florida, for providing facilities where feeders and pasture operators can obtain replacement stock, and for maintaining a market place where more than 20 meat packers, slaughter and butcher buyers in Florida and south Georgia can secure all or part of their slaughter requirements.

Much credit is due," Randall wrote, "to the cooperative's management and directors for the results obtained notwithstanding the many operating problems and difficulties encountered over the years."

The author notes the steady increase in volume handled by the market since its inception at the start of the decade. It notes that GLMA's system of selling in "pen lots" has spurred volume sales in short time.

Statistical data on all phases of Glades Livestock Market operations is featured in the booklet, which may be obtained gratis by writing Information Division, Farmer Cooperative Service, U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington 25, D.C.

However, the Department of Agriculture has already removed the cane quota cut and the following crop, and production will return towards normal, with the 57-58 crop expected to have the same acreage as the 55-56 crop, Sheppard said.

In a statement at Clewiston, Harry T. Vaughn, USSC executive vice president and general manager, said, "We are expecting this year to be our lowest ebb. Quota restrictions and acreage cuts have curtailed our operations for several years, but the restoration of this last acreage cut will bring our next harvest up, so perhaps we are on the upswing again."

LEGION PLANS TURKEY SHOOT

PAHOKEE—American Legion Post 90 will hold its annual fund-raising Turkey Shoot beginning next Friday afternoon at the rear of the Legion home. Commander Bob McQueen announced this week.

The shoot will be held daily until Thanksgiving eve, Monday night.

At its regular meeting Monday night, the Legion made final plans for an open house and dance following the Belle Glade-Pahokee football game, Nov. 21. The shotgun and rifle which have been contested for by Glades residents will be awarded at that time.

A committee in charge of the open house and dance, for which there will be no admission, includes Charles Woodling, A. E. Funderburk, Dale Maxwell and Billy McKinstry.

HUNTERS ON THE 'READY'

Glades hunters who want to bag a turkey for their Thanksgiving dinner have to wait only a week and a half to begin their armed prowling.

The open season on turkeys (either sex), deer, quail and squirrels begins Nov. 20.

The split dove-hunting season closed last week, but will reopen Dec. 1 and continue until Jan. 5, according to data from the State Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

For waterfowl hunters, the season on ducks, geese and coots opened Wednesday throughout the Glades, to continue until Jan. 15. You can hunt woodcocks from Nov. 20 to Dec. 29, and snipe from Dec. 15 to Jan. 13. And the season on rails and gallinules closed today.

Hunters wanting to go after wild hogs and other legal game may hunt in the J. W. Corbett Wildlife Management Area in north central Palm Beach County from Nov. 20 to Dec. 30 for a $5 fee. Check stations will be open at 8 a.m. on Nov. 19, and hunters may camp on the reservation. Rifles are prohibited.

Hunting licenses are available locally at several places in the Glades, and hunters are urged to study regulations carefully and also adhere closely to safety-first procedures.

Bake-Sale Tomorrow

St. Mary's Altar Society will hold a bake-sale in front of the Pahokee post office, Saturday at 10:30 a.m. Mrs. Antoinette Vertommen is chairman of the project.

Jaycees Begin Operation Of The Pahokee Harbor Tonight

PAHOKEE — Commercial operation of Pahokee Harbor will begin at one minute after midnight tonight as the Jaycees-sponsored Pahokee Marina Corp. officially takes over under its lease of the breakwater-harbor facilities from the city.

Complying with terms of its lease, the group has actually been operating the harbor since last month, when it took over the 14-ft. boats available for rental, as well as two outboard motors. Deckage will be available for private boats, and temporary gas facilities have been installed by Manning Keen, through whom Jaycees will sell Standard Marine White gas.

Live bait will be sold at the dock by Capt. Larry Wheeler, the man Pahokee Marina signed up to manage the harbor operations. Wheeler has actually been on the job several weeks, exploring the waters of Lake Okechobee so he can offer hunters advice on fishing and hunting conditions.

"The water level on the lake is now ideal," Wheeler said this week. "The lake bass are big and plentiful, if you know where to look for them."

Wheeler encountered numerous nine- and 10-pound bass on his fishing forays and even lost riggings trying to handle the big ones, using six-pound test monofilament line.

No greater enthusiast about the future of Pahokee Harbor exists than Wheeler. He believes hunters openly will want to put out of Pahokee after waterfowl, now that the duck and geese hunting season is on.

"The potential development of the harbor is unlimited," Wheeler believes. "In three years, I predict the public will become so well aware of our setup that you'll see at least 100 boats at Pahokee Harbor daily, some of them rental boats, the remainder owned by sportsmen."

Oscar Dobrow, president of Pahokee Marina, also is confident that the Jaycee operation of the harbor will bring more income to Pahokee businessmen. "When boaters, big and small, learn about our facilities, they'll put in here regularly."

INSURANCE IS COMM. TOPIC

BELLE GLADE — At a recessed meeting Wednesday night, the City Commission voted to set up a special insurance commission to advise the city as to proper insurance coverage the city should maintain on its properties.

Named to the commission were the four local agencies represented at the meeting: those of Bratley-Bleech, Junius T. Harris, Sara Lee Creech, and William A. Thibault. Also serving on the special commission will be City Manager Robinson and City Clerk Anderson.

A report on a survey of city insurance coverage, which was described as under-insured in some instances, and un-insured in other, was given by Mr. Harris.

A delegation of Negroes was expected to attend the meeting to further discuss recreation facilities, but only one Negro attended, and he was advised to learn about our facilities. Power and Light franchise could be allocated for recreation funds under the $400,000 recreation bond issue is sold.

The county solicitor and state attorney from West Palm Beach are expected to attend the commission's next regular meeting Wednesday night.

Glades Voters May Be Backbone Of Co. Demos

By any stretch of the imagination, will the Glades turn out to be the last stronghold of the Democratic party in Palm Beach County?

Political observers have reason to assume as much, as Republicans showed surprising strength in county coastal cities in the Tuesday election and cast votes in record-breaking volume.

While county voters were giving President Eisenhower a 34,000 to 14,000 majority over Adlai Stevenson, five of the seven Glades precincts gave a majority vote to Stevenson.

Eisenhower had a mere 86-vote edge over his opponent in the Glades precincts, fanned like, 403 to 368, and Belle Glade's white electorate was for him, 622 to 428. But Stevenson won in Canal Point, Chosen, South Bay, Lake Harbor and in Belle Glade colored precinct.

Further evidence of Glades Democratic strength came in the Congressional election. Whereas Rep. Paul Rogers squeaked through with a 23,000 to 20,000 majority in the county, Glades precincts backed him by almost a 5-to-1 margin. Rogers was on top in every Glades precinct, receiving 1,992 votes to 407 votes for his Republican opponent, Mrs. Dorothy Smith.

Glades voters took a step with the county vote in the school bond issue, favoring the issue, 1,822 to 160.

Lions purposely put the turkey on a no-feed diet for a day to build up its appetite. It consumed 514 kernels in the 10-minute span, and Hank Aldridge's guess of 621 won him the bid.

A gallery of half a hundred spectators watched the turkey gorge, and Manning Keen, one of the Lions Pledge men, warned that people should stand back, because last year the turkey ate so much he exploded! Someone countered with a good-natured joke that the gas which Keen is a distributor for "goes just as fast as that corn."

Investigator Louis Lowery of the Belle Glade police department was on official duty at the polls in his city. His most strenuous task turned out to be baby-sitting at the polls for mothers who brought young sons along.

A lot of the small fry, however, got an early education on how to vote, as they accompanied their parents right into voting booths.

Vying for the honor of casting first ballots in Pahokee were B. Elliott, in whose place of business the polls were located, and Malcom Millar, who was subject to call to jury duty in West Palm Beach.

Belle Glade voters kept up a steady queue — so much so that election officials there had to leave their seats in, and couldn't cast their own votes until after everybody else had voted.

One Belle Glade observer was quick to comment that "now those officials will begin to appreciate the Glades and give us more attention," noting reports that because of so heavy a Republican vote on the coast, County Assessor James Owens was trailing his opponent until the Glades vote returns were in.

Members of the Pahokee industrial committee are Lewis Friend, chairman, M. P. Stanley, H. M. McIntosh, Ralph O. Johnson, Leonard Dobrow and Lynn Hunter.

Serving on the Belle Glade industrial sites committee are George C. Young, chairman, James A. Ball, I. L. Price, R. E. Hotard and Junius Harris.

Cornhuskers Tour Glades Farmlands

BELLE GLADE — Mid-western farmers will get an inside view of how Glades growers operate when 98 Nebraska arrivals here this morning on a tour of Florida.

According to H. L. Speer, assistant county agent, the visitors will tour the farm of A. Duda and Sons where they will see a variety of Glades produce. Speer says a tour of this kind is good publicity for the Glades and "we can show them more in a couple of hours than they would be able to see in many other areas of the country."

From Belle Glade the group will go on to Clewiston for a trip through the sugar mill. Preaching safety is one thing; listening is another. Big thing is: Folks who listen, usually get run over by those who don't!

WASHINGTON JITTERS?

This town is buzzing with war talk. Will there be one? Will we be able to keep out of it if one does develop? Already around the press club, some of the fellows are talking about overseas assignments. Several have quietly taken off. You soon will begin to read familiar "by lines" and recognize the voice of your favorite radio commentator as he brings you the latest news from the trouble spots of the world.

War clouds are gathering. And the war correspondents are packing their musette bags. As a class, there is no more romantic and adventuresome group. They live the life of a soldier; side by side with him they take his risks; cut his food; share his hardships, put up with the same dangers — but always unarmed. Instead of a gun, they carry a typewriter. Instead of worrying about personal safety, they worry how to get their daily story back to their paper.

Richard Harding Davis, who wrote "Soldier of Fortune" was the first to gain fame — but that was long ago. Before our time.

Our Army assignment during the war in Europe was that of press officer. That was a sort of combination guide and handy man for the correspondents. In our job we rubbed elbows at one time or another with nearly all those working in the European Theatre.

Most famous of all war correspondents in World War II was Ernie Pyle. He shunned the usual story. Instead, he wrote about the feelings of the soldier who faced the enemy by day and dreamed of home by night. He could always be found where the action was hottest.

We recall a night in the officers' club in London when Ernie showed up rather unexpectedly. The war was in Italy at that time. A buzz ran through the group of newsmen at our table. "If Ernie has left Italy and is back here, then something is getting ready to break."

How right! Three days later the Allies crossed the English Channel.

Later on, our old friend, Paul Gallico covered the front for short-story material. He cared less for the battle than for the aftermath. He was in Paris the day it was liberated. His story for that day told how a little old lady, a seller of flowers, had been driven to cover by sudden machine gun fire. How she crawled beneath a disabled German tank for protection. And the sight of her little head as she carefully raised it to look around — to see the rest of the excitement that was going on. One thing you can be sure of, whether the news is good or bad, there'll be an American newsmen on hand to write the story.

WIDE, WIDE, FLORIDA

Passing through Washington recently was Jim Hopkins, public relations director for the Florida Citrus Commission. A bit of his handiwork will be seen next Sunday, Nov. 11, when the National Broadcasting Company's television program, Wide, Wide, World, will originate in Florida. The portion of the program dealing with citrus was planned and developed by Hopkins.

There will be a live pickup, Jim says, from the Citrus Tower at Clermont. This will give a panoramic view of miles after miles of citrus groves. Then the viewer will follow the entire process of packing and shipping fruit. From the grove to the packing house and the canning plant and the juicing plant. Jim's job is to sell Florida citrus and he thinks this will help do it. Too bad we don't have "taste-o-vision" then the people up north could really enjoy the wonders of a visit to the citrus belt.

United Nations In Action Resembles A Stage Play

(Note: OBSERVER normally attempts to keep its news coverage and editorial comment on the local or state level. Several Glades organizations observed the anniversary of the United Nations recently and in view of this week's crisis in the UN, have asked us to publish background information on the organization. — Editor)

BY PAUL DINNINIS

United Nations headquarters in New York City has been in a turmoil of late. Its sessions have been turbulent, and Americans have had the opportunity to observe international drama via modern miracles of communications, radio and television.

Current incidents which have been the ingredients of UN drama have been, of course, the anti-Communist uprisings in Hungary and the outbreak of hostilities between Israel and Egypt.

It is the latter which revives memories of visits I was privileged to make almost 10 years ago at the first permanent UN headquarters site, near Lake Success, Long Island, an hour's journey from New York City.

Principal subject of UN contention then was the creation of the modern state of Israel. Heated discussions were held on what to do with Jewish refugees from the ghettos and war concentration camps of Europe, and what to do with Arab refugees whose homelands had been taken over "in order to create the state of Israel. Antipathy between Israelis and Arabs was high.

UN facilities at Lake Success left me with strong impressions. It was inspiring to see the flags of all nations unfurled in front of the building. Yet the building itself was unimpressive. It had been a war-time manufacturing site for Sperry Gyroscope Co., and although its interior was refurbished and floors carpeted, unmistakably it was just another industrial building.

The new UN building in New York City is bold in design and gives one a feeling of confidence that surely wise decisions would come forth from such an impressive setting.

You have to spend only a few minutes within the UN to catch the feeling of drama. Delegates are colorful. Most of them wear clothing of the Western nations. But intermingled are Yemeni chieftains in their flowing beards, flowing robes, vari-colored turbans, Indian women in saris, Indian men in rainbow-hued turbans.

A visit to the delegates lounge puts one elbow-to-elbow with the delegates themselves. It is easy to acquire the notion that in this room, indeed, are most of the informal give-and-take decisions made to make the UN a going concern. Away from the glare of the spotlight, it is here delegates may order anything from vegetable juice or coffee to alcoholic beverages popular in the many countries of the world, and sit in relaxation to trade ideas and contemplate the world's future.

MANY TONGUES

The official council rooms are something else. Delegates sit at desks in front of the speaker's desk with their team of aides sitting in depth behind them. Earphones are available for all delegates, as they are for you, the visitor.

Overlooking the council chamber through transparent glass walls are cubicles in which the various language interpreters hold forth. Many of the speeches are in French, the international language, but many are delivered in English, Chinese or Spanish. No matter what tongue is used, the listener eagerly has to turn a switch connected with his earphones to tune into an interpreter giving a word-by-word translation of the speech as the speaker drones on.

In fact, as the speaker talks, if you are sitting in the press section, you can have available a mimeographed version of what the orator is saying, and if you understand his language can follow him almost word by word.

low him almost word by word.

The net effect one gets from attending a UN session is that the public hearing is merely a theatrical production, with the play's theme and the actors' lines already having been worked out earlier. This is true, in that the agenda has already been carefully worked out, and speeches usually written in advance, for reference by translators and for dissemination to the journalistic world.

It is somewhat understandable that UN sessions bring very limited spur-of-the-moment action, because in almost all cases UN delegates must confer with their respective home governments before making their official moves. In the crisis of the past fortnight, however, it seems that action has been so fast that home governments could not have been consulted on every move.

The UN was founded in San Francisco by 50 nations in 1945, and supposedly united some 1.7 billion people. The UN charter provides that member states would be sovereign and equal, would fulfill obligations in good faith, would settle disputes by peaceful means in such a manner as not to endanger peace, security and justice, and would not give assistance to powers against which the UN had taken action to preserve or restore peace.

UN PROVISOS

The UN charter provided for a Security Council and gave it few, select major-nation members the power to veto any action the Security Council's majority might vote for. It also provided a General Assembly, a much larger body in which all member nations may participate, and in which action could not be vetoed. It is from this latter body that most positive UN action has emanated.

The UN charter also provided for the Economic and Social Council (UNESCO), a unit which holds hearings in various parts of the world and makes studies and recommendations to the UN's legislative branch. It is this organization which has come into closest contact with the peoples of the world.

At the UN, the delegates were the Secretariat, the administrative unit; the International Court of Justice; and the Trusteeship Council to govern non-self-governing territories.

Will the UN succeed in being a permanent world organization, or will it die as did the old League of Nations? Americans should be concerned about this question on two counts: (1) because of whether the UN is able to peacefully settle world affairs; and (2) because the U.S. taxpayer is paying the bulk of the cost for the existence of the UN.

Newsmen are usually cynics, but a United Press executive once told me he held high hopes for the UN's success when he attended organization meetings in San Francisco in 1945. High hopes, that is, until the power of veto was given to members of the Security Council. He pointed out, however, that the United States was as insistent as was Russia that the power of veto be granted.

Of all the UN's groups, UNESCO has probably come under most criticism from Americans, many of whom have charged it is communist-dominated.

NAMES APPROVED FOR FFA ADVISORY BOARD

James Harry Wilkinson Jr., Robert B. Simonson and Milton Douglas have been approved by the Palm Beach County Board of Public Instruction to serve on the Pahokee FFA Agriculture Advisory Committee for a three year term each.

The men were recommended by Loren O'Neal, chapter advisor, and will replace Jack Spencer, Duncan Padgett and Floyd Erickson whose terms on the committee have expired.

Whether such charges are true, one must realize that when nations of the world sit together in any type of council, views of nations other than our own — views possibly contrary to ours — may surface and find majority support.

For any world government to succeed absolutely it must be sovereign over all nations. And for it to be sovereign, the United States and all other nations would have to yield some portion of the sovereignty which each holds dear unto itself.

But individuals and their nations have not seen fit to yield sovereignty to the UN. So nations are left to cooperate with the UN as they see fit, to live up to UN charter obligations as their respective consciences dictate.

And, as has been seen, some UN member nations have little or no conscience.

Big Oil Company Has A Heart

BIG FLATS, N. Y.—The big Gulf Oil Corporation isn't "too big" to lend a helping hand to a farmer eager to harvest the crops of corn in which he invested his time and money last spring. The seven acres of leased land at Big Flat, N.Y., on which Steve Mizio and his sons planted the corn was recently sold to the oil company for construction of a 90,000-barrel pipe-line terminal. The company has agreed to hold up construction until the crop can be harvested.

The photograph shows Mr. and Mrs. Mizio looking on while their sons, Edwin and Alfred, get ready to hoe the corn.

Church Activities In The Glades

Father Petrie To Attend Meeting

Father John Clarence Petrie, vicar of St. John the Apostle Episcopal Church, will be in Clearwater on Monday and Tuesday to attend the first session ever held in Florida of Christian Freedom Foundation. Father Petrie is a director of the foundation, a post he has held since its formation eight years ago. He states that the purpose of the foundation is "to combat the spread of the octopus state through the medium of the churches." He says that socialism has come to supplant the Kingdom of God in many places. Convinced that man cannot be free under the welfare state, a group of clergy of many denominations organized to combat this menace. The foundation publishes a fortnightly paper "Christian Freedom," which goes to a hundred thousand ministers of religion.

Father Petrie has announced that on the nights of Nov. 14, 15 and 17, the "Glades Players" will put on a comedy "Suds in Your Eye" at the Sugarland Auditorium in Clearwater. Ninety percent of the profits will go to the kitchen fund of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Martin's Episcopal Church in Clearwater.

The Clewiston congregation of St. Martin's Church will observe the patronal festival of St. Martin of Tours, next Sunday. In addition, Veterans' Day will be observed with a period of silence at 11 a.m.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST, Belle Glade CHRISTIAN SCIENCE GROUP, Canal Point

The spiritual basis for true health and peace will be set forth at Christian Science services this Sunday.

Keynoting the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Mortals and Immortals" is the Golden Text from Romans (8:9), "To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."

Selections to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy include the following (285:4): "Mortals must gravitate Godward, their affections and aims grow spiritual, — they must near the broader interpretations of being, and gain some proper sense of the infinite, — in order that sin and mortality may be put off."

'BEACH' COAST TEAMS TONIGHT IS CRY OF GLADES GRIDDRS

Glades football teams invade the coast tonight to attempt to regain the winner's circle in the Suncoast Conference. Belle Glade travels to Pompano, and Pahokee is at Vero Beach.

Coach Web Bell's Pahokee Blue Devils indeed have a tough assignment tonight as they play the role of Daniel entering Vero's tough lions' den. Vero appears to have the conference title in the bag, having stretched its unbeaten string to five last week in thumping Belle Glade, 26-13.

Vero is ranked 14th in state prep circles, and a Pahokee upset would give the Blue Devils a rating of miracle team of the year. Belle Glade will have its hands full at Pompano, for the latter has enjoyed intermittent gridiron glories. Pompano roared to a 59-0 conquest last week of Seacrest, a club Coach Jim Maynor's eleven beat 13-0. And Pompano beat the Stuart club which turned back Belle Glade a fortnight ago.

The Golden Rams' touchdown twins, Leon Burkett and B. B. Braddock, were effective against Vero last week in a game in which Belle Glade was at its best, physically. If both sparkle tonight, Belle Glade should remain in the scramble for a top conference rating.

Coach Bell is counting on his Blue Devils making a strong defensive stand against Vero. Pahokee has played good defensive basketball most of the year, and last week was guilty of a single costly lapse which let a quick Stuart back break through the middle for a 75-yard touchdown jaunt which iced the game for the visitors. Captains Eugene Pearce and Max Beverly starred on defense last week, and the alert Richard Shackford turned an intercepted pass into a touchdown.

Pahokee's hopes against Vero are of the "if" variety — if the line can bottle Vero backs — if the Pahokee defense can "jell" for a single pay-off play! Clewiston, currently in the conference runner-up slot, tonight entertains Stuart, which of course already "owns" victories over the two Glades clubs it has met.

Beginning Monday, the post office will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily, except Saturdays, when it will close at noon. Money order window will operate 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and until noon Saturdays.

Farnall said first data from the current fiscal year show Belle Glade's postal receipts up 11.4 percent over the same period last year, but that some of the increase is accounted for by the Belle Glade office taking over functions of the old Chosen office.

Growers like DITHANE M-22 ... tomato diseases don't

"During the 1955-56 growing season I used DITHANE M-22 exclusively over over 1000 acres of tomatoes. Disease control was excellent... In spite of generally poor growing conditions my overall average yield was 350 field boxes per acre, which was highly satisfactory under the year's conditions."

JOHN W. CAMPBELL, John W. Campbell Farms Co., Goulds, Florida

"We have used DITHANE on tomatoes and several other crops... more than 10 years... For our last three tomato crops we have used a lot of DITHANE M-22 and are very pleased with the disease control it gave us. Fruit quality has been superior, and all things considered, I believe DITHANE M-22 is the outstanding tomato fungicide available today."

LOYD D. WITT, Witt Bros., Fort Pierce, Florida

There's no argument anywhere about the value of DITHANE M-22 for overall tomato disease control. About the only difference is that some prefer spray powder — others blended dusts available from your local dealer. Either way, this maneb fungicide helps you get lush, rich green foliage and outstanding yields.
